L.A. Exposed includes the facts behind the myths surrounding everything from the tall tales of tinsel town, to the legend and lore of LA landmarks, to rock n' roll rumors, to Southern California's unnatural history, to the city's crime lore, to tales of corruption and conspiracy in the land of sunshine and health; LA Exposed dares to ask the hard questions. Does L.A. really have earthquake weather? Did Alfred Hitchcock ask Grace Kelly to do a strip teast in her front window? Is there treasure buried in the Watts Towers? Are there still opium dens in Chinatown? Was Barbara Streisand ever in a porn film? Young gives readers the lowdown on the city's most enduring myths, exploring their origins, and whether there is an ounce of truth to any of them.

Editorial Review

From Publishers Weekly

Was Fidel Castro an extra in a Hollywood movie? Did Hitchcock ask Grace Kelly to do a strip tease in her window? Do murder rates go up when the Santa Ana winds arrive? These and other rumors are explained and dispelled (or verified) in L.A. Exposed: Strange Myths and Curious Legends in the City of Angels. Paul Young (Buzzwords: L.A. Freshspeak, with Anna Scotti) researched dozens of persistent urban myths and scandals surrounding the celebrities, landmarks, natural history, politicians and criminals of Los Angeles. Writing in the breathless, hyperbolic style of the tabloid stories he investigates, the knowledgeable Young is not immune to stirring up a few conspiracy theories of his own.

From Library Journal

Young (coauthor, Buzzwords: L.A. Fresh Speak) has compiled a wide collection of stories about the many myths, rumors, urban legends, and flat-out lies surrounding Los Angeles and Hollywood. The book has limited academic value, but fans of popular culture in general and those who enjoy stories about the City of Angels in particular will find a treasure of fascinating tales. Young tends to focus on the sexually lurid aspects of Hollywood mythmaking, with many stories fit for the National Enquirer. He considers such rumors as Jamie Lee Curtis's being a hermaphrodite, Errol Flynn's spying for the Third Reich, whether Tom Cruise is gay, and so on. Also recounted are specific claims about the city, such as the treasure buried in Watts Towers and the mythic opium dens in Chinatown. The author seldom reaches any conclusions about these stories; mostly, he simply tells us that many rumors are false. Diehard fans of L.A.-style sensationalism might appreciate this collection, but those looking for any real conclusions about the city and its inhabitants will be disappointed. Recommended with reservations for public libraries specializing in popular culture.

The breathless title gives hope that this may pack the same punch as Kenneth Anger's trash fest Hollywood Babylon. Although Young's account has its fair share of sensationalism--he covers some of the same scandals Anger did, including the Fatty Arbuckle affair--its pages are padded with other, less-than-titillating "allegations," such as the fact that before L.A. had aqueducts, the city hired rainmakers to find water. But on to more pressing questions: Was Charles Manson secretly working for the FBI? Did President Kennedy have Marilyn Monroe murdered? Young answers "speculation" to the first, and "no one will ever know for sure" to the second. Equivocating answers like these sometimes make the book less than satisfying, and there's a psychobabble problem, too: Manson represents "the dark sinister forces of the unconscious, which when ignored . . . explode in paroxysms of repressed rage." On the plus side, the format, reminiscent of Confidential magazine, is delightfully kitschy; and the contents, though uneven, are sometimes both fascinating and funky. Enquiring minds will find the good parts. Ilene Cooper
