Andrew Martin may be married, but Helena Fitzhugh is convinced he truly loves her. Unfortunately, David Hillsborough—Helena's brother's best friend and an annoying thorn in her side for years—has stumbled across their secret trysts and put a stop to them. Six months later, when the opportunity to "meet" with Andrew presents itself, Helena rushes off to the Savoy only to find it is a trap set by Andrew's busybody sister-in-law. Fortunately, David also catches wind of the meeting, and he manages to create the illusion that the romantic rendezvous at the hotel is between himself and Helena as a postscript to their recent elopement. Before Helena can put an end to their fictitious marriage, she is involved in a carriage accident that leaves her with amnesia and gives David the perfect opportunity to finally woo and win the woman he has always loved. Thomas' splendidly nuanced characters and emotionally compelling plot give the third book in her latest lushly sensual, exquisitely written historical trilogy (Ravishing the Heiress, 2012) a rare richness and depth readers will treasure. --John Charles
