Occupational Therapy in Housing: Building on Firm Foundations From Brand: Wiley

This book provides practitioners with the foundations onto which they can build their own understanding and practice within housing.

It is based on two fundamental principles: the importance of homes becoming enabling environments, and promoting user-centred services. The authors argue that occupational therapists working in the distinct context of housing require additional background knowledge and professional skills to those used within healthcare settings.

- Explores a broad range of theory bases and developing practice within the area of occupational therapy in housing
- Presents a vast array of knowledge, research and experience
- Written by occupational therapists working as practitioners, educators and managers, alongside academics in the social policy and disability issues

Editorial Review

Review

"... publication provides the firm foundations to becoming the recommended first choice text for any occupational therapists interested in housing-related issues." (British Journal of Occupational Therapy, January 2007)

From the Back Cover

Occupational Therapy in Housing

This book explores a broad range of theory bases and developing practice within the area of occupational therapy in housing. It is based on two fundamental principles:

Homes becoming enabling environments, and promoting user-centred services. It supplies the additional background knowledge and professional skills needed by occupational therapists working in housing. They should then be able to build their own understanding and practice on the foundations supplied in this book.

The knowledge, research and experience presented in the book has been compiled from occupational therapists working as practitioners, educators and managers, alongside academics working on social policy and disability issues.

The book will be of use to students and occupational therapists new to the area of housing; it will also be invaluable for experienced practitioners engaged in the complexities of work within the housing field.
